The proper name is Ciné-Kodak Magazine 16, but I've been putting Kodak first to group them logically.>br>

20 years of progress: compare it to its direct ancestor, the Ciné-Kodak Model B. It's about half the length, 1/3rd the width, but not that much lighter. They really pack these things full.

This one takes interchangeable bayonet-mount lenses: a 15mm f/2.7, a 25mm f/1.4, a 25mm 24mm f/1.9 (standard), a 50mm f/1.6, a 50mm f/3.5, a 63mm f/2.7, a 102mm f/2.7, and a 152mm f/4.5. I have the 50mm f/1.9 and the 15mm f/2.7, which I believe were the standard kit lenses. The instructions say that you need a Ciné Adapter Type M to make the other lenses fit the mount.
