Tudor NFL Electric Football Game 1988

CA$8 / week

The game is played on a metal field, plastic players on bases, which react to the vibration of the field, are placed on the field in formations, just as in real football. When the formations are completed by the offensive coach and the defensive coach, audibles in the form of pivots or motions are made in order to try to gain an advantage. A switch is activated that turns on an electric counterbalanced motor which causes the field to vibrate and the players to move around the field.
