The Sears Spaceline, produced in the mid-1960s by Murray for Sears, is a chrome-plated bike featuring a distinctive space-age design. This model includes a battery-powered headlight, red and white accents, white grips with tassels, and a padded white saddle with a red accessory pouch. The sleek chrome frame captures the futuristic optimism of the 1960s, making it ideal for film or TV sets that depict this era or embrace retro-futuristic aesthetics
