This vintage telephone switchboard operator headset and mouthpiece is an iconic piece of communication history. Featuring a bakelite earcup with a sturdy wire headband and an attached trumpet-style mouthpiece, this set is designed for use at manual switchboards, as commonly seen in the early-to-mid 20th century. The leather-wrapped cord and plug add authenticity and period detail.

This headset is ideal for recreating scenes of vintage communication or office settings, including 1930s-1950s switchboard operations. It's a functional yet historically evocative artifact that could add character to period dramas, films, or museum exhibits.
