1963 New York City Subway Car Set

Contact for pricing

This Redbird R33WF subway car interior set has all the charm of a 1960s NYC commute: sticky red floors, steel poles that definitely haven't been wiped since Nixon was president, and enough turquoise paneling to make your colorist love your art department.

Originally entering service in the 1960s, these cars somehow managed to keep chugging along until 2003. Perfect for any production set between the Johnson administration and the graffiti splattered chaos of the early 2000s. Just add a saxophone player and one guy angrily doing a crossword.

The set is composed of multiple pieces, so it can be disassembled for storage and shipping.
