Functional.

The Motorola Cadet Portable Television 11", introduced in 1965, was a popular mid-60s portable TV known for its compact design and practical portability. Featuring an 11-inch black-and-white screen and a convenient handle, it supported both VHF and UHF channels, catering to the growing need for more versatile and mobile televisions. This model is well-suited for movie or TV sets depicting mid-to-late 1960s and early 1970s American homes, adding an authentic touch to any retro-themed production
